Dear Mr Starmer

I noticed on the news yesterday the Mr Sunak PM said he was sad and disappointed regarding all the strikes that are going on.

I wrote to him today,

" Dear Mr Sunak

It is sad and disappointing when people don't behave as you would expect them to.

I had that experience when I was held responsible for a Local Authority error. I was bankrupted, thrown out of my house and totally ignored.

Quite distressing when your children are made homeless".

What I found in the past is that those in government will not listen to anyone, if they are saying it then it is right if someone else is saying it then it falls on deaf ears and so it goes on and on and on.

I have emailed your department 2-3 times and no doubt I will get a reply at some point saying something like "there is nothing we can do" or "we note what you say" or "you will have to contact ????????".

Yes it is the kick it in the long grass response. Neil Kinnock's office was the same and Tony Blair's office, practiced at deceit and never acknowledging the truth. Even the late queens office "referred to The Lord Chancellor".

Don't you think the British people deserve better than this?

Kind Regards

Malcolm Debono

Dear Mr Starmer

* You haven't provided many details here

Initially I wrote "Is there a place in the UK that provides help for people that have suffered at the hands of the judiciary".

The basis of my complaint is that we are told to comply with rules yet even the government will not uphold those rules.

Over the past 30+ years I have been sent from pillar to post and what I found is that there are people in government who are inclined to not take any responsibilty and they will try to put their resposibilties on to someone else.

I have made my complaint to those in government and even to the late Queen Elizabeth II.

Kind Regards

Dear Mr Starmer

Thank you for your email.

Sorry for asking "as a barrister".

I will rephrase my question can you please tell me.
As leader of the opposition is there a place in the UK that provides help for people that have suffered at the hands of the judiciary.

Kind Regards

Dear Malcolm,

Thank you for your message.

While Keir was a barrister in the past, he is no longer able to give legal advice.

If you live in Keir's constituency please let us know your full address.

Best wishes,

Office of Keir Starmer MP
